The Whiz Kids...Dick Sisler's ninth-inning home run against the Dodgers at Ebbets Field, Brooklyn, the last Sunday of the season, broke a 1-1 tie to send the Phightin' Phillies to their first World Series since 1915...After a gut-wrenching 1-0 loss to the Yankees at Shibe Park (later Connie Mack Stadium) in Game One, "The Bronx Bombers" dispatched the Phils in quick order by sweeping the last three contests. The last game at Yankee Stadium, a 5-2 win for New York, was the only one of the Series to be decided by more than one run. Bobby Brown (.333) and Joe DiMaggio (.308 with a home run) were the Yanks top hitters. Granny Hamner hit .429 for the Phillies, including two doubles and a triple... A young Phillies ball club (the average age was twenty-six) was led by Del Ennis's 31 home runs and 126 RBI during the regular season. "Whitey" Ashburn, who hit .176 with a double in the World Series, led the National League with 14 triples. Willie Jones (who scored 100 runs) hit 25 homers while catcher Andy Seminick ended the year with twenty-four. Eddie Waitkus led the team with 102 runs scored. The Phillies hit .265, 55 triples, and 125 homers...Ace Robin Roberts was the leader of the pitching staff with a 20-11 W/L record, 21 complete games, and five shutouts. Lefty Curt Simmons ended the year 17-6 and reliever Jim Konstanty, normally the closer, was the starting pitcher in Game One of the Fall Classic. During the regular season, Konstanty was 16-7. He finished 62 ball games. The Phils staff had the best ERA in the majors (3.50) and fewest runs allowed (624)...Game Two of the World Series was the last post-season game ever played at Shibe Park which had been the home of some great Athletics teams managed by Connie Mack.
