The Red Sox, under their player/manager, Bill "Rough" Carrigan, shadowed the American League leaders through June before gaining momentum and rolling to the pennant with a 65-27 run from July 1st to the end of the season. They took over sole possession of first place August 22nd and went a spiffy 22-11 in the month of September...Twenty-year-old "Babe" Ruth, exclusively a pitcher in Carrigan's starting rotation, was five up and two down from September 1st to the end of the regular schedule, October 7th. Ruth was 18-8 overall, completed 16 games, and struck out 112 batters. During the same span, "Rube" Foster, 19-8, for the year, was 5-2. Fellow 19-game winner Ernie Shore posted a 6-1 mark. Foster topped the pitching staff with 21 complete games and five shutouts. Shore completed seventeen games, including four shutouts. The Red Sox strikeout leader was "Dutch" Leonard (116). He and "Smoky Joe" Wood both won fifteen ball games. Wood's ERA was second in the majors to the Phillies Pete Alexander (1.22). Shore's ERA was fifth-best in the big leagues. Leonard, Ruth, and Wood all allowed fewer than seven hits per nine innings pitched, Leonard the fewest at 6.38, also second to Alexander. The Boston pitching corps had the league's second-best ERA (2.39)...As a team, the Red Stockings hit .260 with a total of 14 home runs (remember this is baseball's "Dead Ball" era). They compiled 202 doubles and 76 triples. In 42 total games (11 pinch-hitting appearances), Ruth led the Bostons with four home runs. He drove home 20 and socked 10 doubles in 92 at bats. "Tris" Speaker's 108 runs scored were the most on the team along with his 176 base hits. Leftfielder "Duffy" Lewis's 76 runs batted in were a team high...The World Series opened October 8th in Philadelphia's Baker Bowl with a 3-1 Phillies victory behind Alexander. The next four games were all one-run contests with Boston taking all four for their third World Championship. Ruth did not pitch but made one appearance (unsuccessful) as a pinch-hitter. Foster won two games during the Series, striking out thirteen in eighteen innings, and stroked four hits in eight at bats. Harry Hooper hit two home runs while Lewis added one. The Red Sox would repeat as World Champions in 1916 by defeating the Brooklyn Robins.
