One could make a case that the '57 Braves are among the greatest teams in baseball history. Here's the proof: In his fourth season in the big leagues, twenty-three-year-old Henry Aaron was the National League MVP. "The Hammer" slugged the most home runs in the majors (44); drove in the most runs (132); and collected the most total bases (369). He was the N. L. leader in runs scored (118). Aaron's slugging percentage (.600) ranked him fifth in MLB; his OPS of .978 also placed him fifth. Lastly, he struck out only 58 times the entire season and was second in the majors with 198 base hits. Eddie Mathews (32 homers, 94 RBI, 109 runs scored) hit his 200th career home run, June 12th. Pitcher Warren Spahn became the first lefthander to win the Cy Young Award off his N. L. leading 21 victories and 18 complete games. (There was only one Cy Young winner in the majors at this time.) Spahn also saved three games in four relief appearances. Wes Covington, who replaced the traded Bobby Thomson in leftfield, swatted 21 dingers and knocked in 65 runs. Del Crandall added 15 home runs to the league-high total of 199 for the year. The Braves also led the N. L. in runs scored (772), triples (62), and slugging percentage (.442)...The pitching staff finished second in ERA (3.47); led the league with 60 complete games; and allowed the fewest home runs (124). Bob Buhl won 18 games while Lew Burdette won 17 times. Combined, Spahn, Buhl, and Burdette were 56-27 with 36 complete games and 7 shutouts...Milwaukee won its only World Championship in that city after beating the Yankees in seven games, the clincher a 5-0 shutout by Burdette at Yankee Stadium. He won three games in the '57 Fall Classic and was chosen as the Series MVP. Aaron hit .393 with three homers and seven RBI...The Braves won the N. L. pennant by eight games and posted a ten-game winning streak from August 4th through the 15th.
