A's Notes: Outfielder Bill North, the last player remaining from the A's 1974 World Champions, played in 24 games before he was traded to the Dodgers for Glenn Burke, May 17th. Always looking to wheel-and-deal, Charlie Finley came close to selling the franchise to a group from Denver, headed by oil mogul Marvin Davis, who hoped to relocate the A's to the Mile High City. Davis had offered to buy the team for $12 million in December 1977. However, the group that owned the Oakland-Alameda County Coliseum blocked the transfer through a court order because the franchise still had ten years remaining on its lease for the ball park. Davis soon tired of all the litigation and dropped his proposed purchase...The team was very competitive through the first 117 games (61-56, third place, five games out) but rounded out the campaign 8-37 to finish with their second straight losing season...Team Leaders: Mitchell Page (17 homers, 70 RBI, 147 base hits, 62 runs scored). Dave Revering hit 16 home runs and drove in forty-seven...John Henry Johnson won 11 games and completed seven while Matt Keough whiffed 108 batters. Pete Broberg posted ten wins and struck out ninety-four. Reliever Bob Lacey led the A. L. in games pitched...The A's hit .245 and 100 homers for the year; the pitching staff's ERA was 3.62, sixth best in the league...Two 18-year-old pitchers, Mike Morgan and Tim Conroy, made their major league debuts. The former pitched a nine-inning complete game but lost to Baltimore, June 11th while the latter pitched 3 1/3 innings, walked five and struck out none in a no-decision, June 23rd, versus Kansas City. Morgan walked five, struck out none, and allowed two earned runs on ten hits in his first big league appearance. The former Athletics first-round draft pick would go on to win 141 games in his career...Managers' records: Winkles (24-15), McKeon (45-78). McKeon assumed his duties May 23rd with the team in first place. They lost to the Brewers that day, 3-2, in front of a crowd just over 2,500.
