Alfonso Soriano's lone season in Washington was a smash: a team-leading 46 home runs, 179 base hits, and 119 runs scored. He ended the year second to Ryan Zimmerman's 110 RBI with ninety-five. Soriano's ten million dollar salary was not conducive to the Nats' wallet; he left as a free agent for the Cubs in November. Nick Johnson popped 23 homers, drove home 77, and scored 100 runs. Zimmerman hit 20 home runs. Washington posted a .262 team batting average and 164 homers...The pitching staff's ERA (5.03) was the N. L.'s worst. The most wins on the staff were Ramon Ortiz's eleven; his 104 strikeouts topped the mound corps as well. Tony Armas, Jr. and Livan Hernandez both won nine ballgames. The staff gave up 872 runs for the year.
