Lots of speculation was in the air as former manager Joe Torre's contract expired at the end of the '07 season. What made all involved more anxious was the fact Torre seemed to be held in perpetual limbo before being offered a contract at a reduced salary. Alex Rodriguez, Andy Pettitte, Mariano Rivera, and Jorge Posada became free agents as well. Those four later re-signed with the Yanks, but Torre, feeling somewhat disrespected, refused the pact and departed to manage the Dodgers, signing with them November 1, 2007. Joe Girardi, who had managed the Marlins to a 78-84 record in 2006, and had the team vying for a Wild Card spot, was fired at the end of the year when he and Marlins owner Jeffrey Loria couldn't get along. He was named the Yankees new field boss, October 30, 2007...New York did not make the playoffs for the first time since 1993—not counting August 1994's strike-canceled season...Team leaders: "A-Rod" (35 homers, 103 RBI, 104 runs scored); Bobby Abreu (20 home runs, 100 RBI, 180 base hits, 100 runs scored); Mike Mussina (20-9 W/L record, 150 strikeouts); and Pettitte (14 wins, 158 K's)...The Yankees hit .271 and 180 homers for the year; the pitching staff's ERA was 4.28...The season closed with New York eight games behind American League champ Tampa Bay from whom the Yanks WON 10 of 18 games.
