New General Manager Ben Cherington hired Bobby Valentine to replace Terry Francona as the Red Sox manager in November 2011...The ballplayers did not respond well to "Bobby V's" sometimes old-school, abrasive style and muddled through the season. It had started in April when Valentine openly criticized Kevin Youkilis for not playing as hard as he had in the past according to the manager. (Note: The Red Sox had lost twenty of the last twenty-seven games to end 2011. Players were regularly in the locker room during games eating or playing video games. Some reportedly did the same on the bench as well.) Prominent teammates immediately came to Youkilis' defense. As in 2011, the ball club continued its seemingly disinterested approach to the game but were .500 at the All Star break. The "going-through-the-motions" attitude continued in the season's second half and losing ballgames became more prevalent--a 16-42 record from August to the end of the season. The Red Sox ended the year with their worst record since 1965. Rumors and whispers of Valentine's dismissal grew as the season neared its conclusion. He was let go October 4th and former pitching coach John Farrell was hired, October 20th...Jarrod Saltalamacchia led the Bosox with 25 home runs. Adrian Gonzalez was the RBI leader (86). David Ortiz hit 23 home runs and drove in sixty...Clay Buchholz and Felix Doubront both led the pitching staff with eleven wins. Doubront had the most strikeouts (167). Jon Lester collected 166 K's...The Red Sox hit .260 and 165 homers...The staff ERA was 4.70. Postscript: Boston would win the AL East and a World Championship in 2013.
