The Twins of the mid-1960s fielded some of the best ballclubs in baseball. They were American League Champions in 1965 and had finished second in 1966. When the team was only 20-22 at the end of May and floundering in sixth place, manager Sam Mele was fired and replaced by the organization's Triple A skipper, Cal Ermer, June 9th. The Twins then reeled off a 20-11 record leading into the All Star break which elevated them to third place, 2 ½ games out of first. An 8-3 start in August helped them reach the top spot, August 13th. September 1st found the ballclub in second, but they wrapped up the season with a 16-12 record and in a tie with the Red Sox for first going into the last day of the year. (Brilliant timing by the schedule-makers.) At Fenway Park, October 1st, Boston beat the Twins, 5-3, while the Tigers (in second, one-half game out) split a doubleheader in Detroit with the Angels, sending the Bosox to the World Series and dropping Minnesota to the runner-up position. In that season finale, the Twins held a 2-0 lead until the Boston sixth when the Red Sox scored their five runs on four straight singles, two wild pitches, and an error...All Star Dean Chance, 26, tossed a no-hitter, August 25th, against the Indians in Cleveland, but gave up a run in the first when The Tribe loaded the bases on two walks and an error with one out. Chance then made a wild pitch allowing the runner at third to score. The Twins won, 2-1. Chance struck out eight and walked five before 10,519 spectators...For the year, the team hit .240 and 131 home runs led by Harmon Killebrew's 44 jacks, a major league-best he shared with Boston's Carl Yastrzemski. Killebrew topped the majors in walks (131) and the Twins with 113 RBI and 105 runs scored. The swift Cesar Tovar had the most base hits (173). Tony Oliva was second to Killebrew in RBI (83). Bob Allison (75 RBI) slammed 24 homers... Chance wound up a 20-game winner and the pitching staff's strikeout leader (220). He led the A. L. with 18 complete games. Jim Kaat won another Gold Glove, whiffed 211 batters, and won 16 games. Dave Boswell, who won 14 games, punched out 204 opponents; lefty Jim Merritt contributed 13 victories. The staff ended the year second in the league with 1,089 K's, 16 shutouts, and a 3.14 ERA. They allowed the fewest walks (396)...Rod Carew began his major league career as the A. L. Rookie of the Year.
