The Twins won 101 games in 2019 to win their first AL Central Division crown since 2010; they reprised with another title in 2020. Under second-year manager Rocco Baldelli, the team played .600 baseball once again over the 60-game schedule shortened by the COVID-19 worldwide pandemic. Minnesota was paired against Houston in a best two-out-of-three Wild Card playoff series. The Twins picked up only two runs on seven hits in their bracket match-up, won by the Astros, 2-0. Twins pitching held Houston to seven runs, thirteen hits, and a .194 batting average. Minnesota struggled to hit .119 (7-59)...Their 91 home runs placed them third overall in the league. The big boppers were Nelson Cruz (16) while Miguel Sano, Eddie Rosario, and Byron Buxton each cracked 13. Rosario was the RBI leader (42); Cruz knocked home 33. Newcomer Josh Donaldson and his power bat were welcomed through free agency. In 28 games played, he managed six jacks and eleven RBI...The hurlers were third in the A. L. with a 3.58 ERA. They allowed the fewest home runs in the majors (62). Kenta Maeda and Randy Dobnak posted the most wins (6 each). Maeda whiffed 80 opponents.
