In addition to coping with the COVID-19 pandemic, resulting in a 60-game season, the Diamondbacks were a team in transition in 2020. A quartet of familiar names considered to be the future of the franchise were dealt at the trade deadline, August 31st. Pitchers Robbie Ray, Archie Bradley, and Andrew Chafin along with outfielder Starling Marte departed for other locales. Include infielder Jake Lamb who was released September 12th and picked up by Oakland...Newcomer Kole Calhoun led "The Snakes" with 16 jacks and 40 RBI. Twenty-four-year-old Zac Gallen became the leader of the pitching staff with his three wins and 82 strikeouts. Merrill Kelly also won three ballgames and posted 29 K's. Thirty-one-year-old Madison Bumgarner, a free agent and the recipient of a five-year $85 million contract in December 2019, struggled to a 1-4 won/loss record in nine starts prior to winding up the year on the injured list August 10th. "Madbum" finished with 30 punch outs and allowed 13 home runs.
