The Red Sox's fifth place finish overall in the AL East for the season--one split into two halves by the ignominious 50-day players strike--is not a true picture of the entire campaign. They ran with the pack all season, never being more than 5 ½ games out of first (September 14th) and being as many as 12 games over .500 (September 25th, fourth place, a half-game out). Against division opponents, they were a very respectable 28-19. Their first half record was 30-26 (5th) while in the second half they were the runner-up (29-23)...Ralph Houk, the former Yankee player/manager/GM, became the 35th skipper in Red Sox history in late October 1980. Soon after his hiring, the ballclub traded three long-time favorites: Rick Burleson, Butch Hobson, and Fred Lynn to the Angels. In return, the Bosox received two players, third baseman Carney Lansford and reliever Mark Clear, who became prominent pieces of a good line-up and pitching staff. Among those transactions, Boston also picked-up former outfielder Rick Miller, outfielder Joe Rudi (the end of his career not far away), and veteran lefty hurler Frank Tanana who was plugged in as a starter...Lansford led the American League in batting average and finished third in the big leagues with 134 base hits. Second time All Star Dwight Evans, entering the prime of his career, was awarded his fourth Gold Glove and ended the season among major league leaders in several categories. "Dewey" topped the majors with 85 walks, finished among at least the top five in on-base percentage (.415); slugging percentage (.522); and OPS (.937, the A. L.'s best mark). His 84 runs scored were second best in the big leagues; his 22 homers tied him for third; and his 71 RBI placed him seventh. Those stellar stats allowed Evans to acquire the third-most votes for league MVP. Jim Rice collected 128 hits, good for tenth place in the majors...Starter Mike Torrez and reliever Bob Stanley both won 10 games to lead the pitching staff. Dennis Eckersley finished with nine victories and 79 strikeouts. Clear, who served as the closer, whiffed 82 batters...The potent Red Sox offense--.275 team BA, 519 runs scored, and 1,052 hits--produced the highest figures in baseball. The staff ERA (3.81) was ninth best...Carl Yastrzemski, 41, spent most of his time in his 21st season with the Red Sox as "The Hitter". He hit seven homers and drove home 49.
