In 1960, Philip K. Wrigley, the Cubs owner and the chewing gum magnate, decided to have his team more "efficiently" managed by a "College of Coaches" a la his private business. It consisted of a rotating staff of eight or so individuals each assigned a particular responsibility with no real defined single field manager. It turned out to be a horrendous failure with the '65 season the last experimental attempt. The Cubbies played 164 games--the scheduled 162 of which two games ended in a tie (with the Mets and Phillies). The players' statistics for those two games were officially counted. Bob Kennedy was the primary leader of the coaching committee until he was let go June 13th, the Cubs holding a record of 24-32-2. Coach Lou Klein served as main skipper the rest of the way...Despite all the confusion, Ernie Banks, 34, (28 HR, 106 RBI); Ron Santo, 25, (33 HR, 101 RBI); and "Sweet Swingin'" Billy Williams, 27, (34 HR, 108 RBI) thrived at bat and in the field. Williams ended the year among the top five in many hitting categories in the majors: batting average, slugging percentage (.552); OPS (.929); runs scored (115); hits (203); doubles (39); RBI, and homers. Santo finished among the top big league hitters as well, including his .888 OPS. The North Siders hit .238 as a team (8th in the N.L.) and 134 homers (5th)...Veterans Larry Jackson and Dick Ellsworth both were 14-game winners; former Brave Bob Buhl won 13 times. The pitching staff also owned two of the game's top relievers: Ted Abernathy, who led the majors in games pitched and saves, and the hard-throwing Lindy McDaniel, a former Cardinal who joined the Cubs with 104 career saves. Submarine-hurler Abernathy struck out 104 batters; McDaniel whiffed 92. Sore-armed reliever Ernie Broglio, part of the infamous trade which sent Lou Brock to St. Louis, put up a 1-6 W/L mark, walked 46 opponents and ended the year with an alarming 2.151 WHIP...Catcher Chris Krug's last name is pronounced KROOG...Starter Bill Faul was on the mound for a major league record THREE triple plays. He assisted during a loss to Milwaukee, July 14th, but did not figure in the two others--July 25th and October 3rd, both losses against the Pirates...Future mound kingpin Ken Holtzman, only 19, debuted September 4th against the Giants. In one inning pitched, he gave up one hit and one earned run (a homer).
