The defending AL East champions were never higher than third place after April 20th. On December 7, 2022, the Yankees resigned star free agent outfielder Aaron Judge to a 9-year $360 million contract, effectively keeping him from jumping to another team offering more cash--namely the Giants or Padres. With few better options, GM Brian Cashman inked first sacker Anthony Rizzo for two years and $34 million dollars. Judge would play in just 106 games and spend much of the season mending a toe injury. He suffered the injury falling backward through a gate in the outfield fence at Dodger Stadium in June. He was in the line-up enough to club 37 homers--including three in Washington, August 23rd, one of which was a grand slam. He knocked in 75 runs. September 2nd, the big bopper hit his 250th career homer, making him the fastest player in big league history to reach that mark. Complimenting Judge were Gleyber Torres (24 HRs, 68 RBI) and Giancarlo Stanton (24 HRs, 60 RBI). The Yanks hit .227, 14th in the league...Gerrit Cole (15-4) won the league Cy Young Award and struck out 222 batters. Reliable closer Clay Holmes saved 24 ballgames while Michael King whiffed 127 foes. The much maligned Domingo German was "perfect" June 28th, facing 27 Oakland A's and allowing not one to reach base. Eleven A's were strike out victims...Fourth at the All Star break and eight games out, a nine-game losing streak in August finally shut down any post-season hopes.
