The absence of three Rockies from the line-up HAD to play a huge role in a 100-loss season, the first in franchise history. To begin, prime starter German Marquez was lost for the season on May 2nd to Tommy John surgery. Brendan Rogers was on the injured list most of the year following an operation to his left shoulder. And then there's Kris Bryant, a former NL MVP, who has been unavailable for much of his two years with the Rockies and has yet to come close to living up to a seven-year, $182 million contract signed before the 2022 season. Two bad feet and a tender back have kept him off the field. As it is, Colorado plopped into last place of the NL West April 11th and called it their own for the rest of the campaign. To add insult to injury, the Angels demolished the Rockies, 25-1, on June 24th, at Coors Field. The Halos scored 13 times in the third inning...Ryan McMahon (70 RBI) hit the most homers (23). Ezequiel Tovar drove home the most runs (73). Nolan Jones, 25, looks like a star-in-the-making off a 20-home run, 62 RBI season in 106 games played...Tall and lanky Austin Gomber was the big winner on the pitching staff with nine. The staff's ERA (5.67) was the worst in the majors. They allowed 957 runs and struck out the fewest batters.
