For the first time since 1953 and a 107-loss season in 1961, the Phightin' Phillies put together back-to-back winning seasons under the direction of "The Little General," manager Gene Mauch. The Phils reached and maintained a spot in the first division for good August 14th after a doubleheader sweep of the Cubs at Connie Mack Stadium, eight games out of first place. Over their last 41 games, they won 24 to solidify their final position in the standings...Most Valuable Player candidate Johnny Callison, 24, put up big numbers: 36 doubles, 11 triples, and 26 home runs. He drove home 78 runs, third on the ballclub to Don Demeter's 83 and Roy Sievers' 82. Demeter homered 22 times, Sievers 19. The franchise's top prospect, Dick Allen (aka Richie by the Philly press), debuted at 21 years of age September 3rd going one for three against the Braves, starting in left field. His first big league hit was a double off starter Denny Lemaster in the 7th inning at Milwaukee. Allen struck out swinging in his first plate appearance and grounded into a double play in the fourth before being lifted for a pinch hitter in the ninth. Ray Culp pitched a complete game two-hit shutout, winning 2-0. It was Culp's 12th win of 14 to lead the pitching staff. He wound up third in Rookie of the Year voting. Veteran Cal McLish won 13 games, reliever Jack Baldschun 11...The Phils finished third in batting (.252) and third in ERA (3.09)...What's In a Name? Cal McLish's complete birth name is Calvin Coolidge Julius Caesar Tuskahoma McLish. He was born in Anadarko, Oklahoma, 50 miles southwest of Oklahoma City, in 1925. At that time, the town's population was just over 3,000. As of 2020, the census recorded just under 6,000 residents. Once part of the Old West's Oklahoma Territory, today about six percent of the population is listed as Native American.
