The Colt .45s played their first three seasons in a temporary ball park known as "Colt Stadium." It seated spectators in an UNCOVERED grandstand which stretched foul line-to-foul line. Dimensions were 360 feet down the lines and 420 feet to dead centerfield. Colt Stadium is best remembered for its oppressive heat and humidity during the Texas summer, and for large mosquitoes who held no remorse attacking ball player and fan alike. During this time, "The Astrodome," the team's eventual playpen, was being constructed nearby...

Future Hall of Famer, Joe Morgan, was signed November 1, 1962. He made his big league debut September 21, 1963. At 19-years of age, Morgan was zero for one against the Phillies...Broadcaster Harry Kalas started his big league career with the Colts in '63 as well...

Catcher John Bateman led the Colts with just ten home runs and 59 RBI. Daniel "Rusty" Staub, all of nineteen years old, made his major league debut April 9th against the Giants and was one for three at the plate with a run batted in. Staub went on to hit six home runs and drive in forty-five as a rookie. The top winner on the pitching staff was Dick "Turk" Farrell who won fourteen games and completed twelve. Ken Johnson was 11-17 and led the staff with 148 strikeouts. Don Nottebart and Hal Woodeshick (94 K's) each won eleven games. Hal Brown (5-11) pitched three shutouts! The staff ERA was 3.44 and gave up the fewest homers in the majors (95)...Colts batters hit .220 for the season (9th in the league) and 62 home runs (fewest in the majors). The tenth place Mets hit .219 for the year...Nottebart owns the distinction of pitching a no-hitter, (beating the Phillies at Houston May 17th) but giving up an unearned run in the fifth following an error by the Colts shortstop. The Phils Don Demeter advanced to second on the play, was thus sacrificed to third, and scored on a sacrifice fly by Don Hoak. The Colts won the ballgame, 4-1, with Nottebart striking out eight for his fifth win.
